Why IT Audit Services Are Needed

IT Controls exist within an organization's internal control framework to provide assurance over the confidentiality, integrity and availability of data. There are 2 main categories of IT controls:

- 1. IT General Controls providing general control over the IT environment (e.g. change management, user and access management, etc); and
- 2. IT Application Controls providing automated system-based controls over business transaction processing (e.g. system configuration settings).

IT General Controls are the foundation for the overall IT control environment as they provide the assurance that systems operate as intended and that output is reliable. Failure to ensure these controls are designed and operating effectively means you will not have assurance over the IT Application Controls, or any reports supporting IT Dependent manual controls, both of which directly support your business processes.

The First Line of Defense: 5 Defensive Linemen (Business Operations)

- People who work to prevent a touchdown either by proactively thwarting a play by running a blitz, or by stopping the ball at the line of scrimmage.
- Perform without getting a good look at where the ball is going

The Second Line of Defense: 2 Linebackers and 2 Cornerbacks (Business Support Functions)

- They can see a play develop, and can either proactively tell the first line of defense to modify their play or react to attempt to capture the ball themselves.
- Perform with broader field of view

The Third Line of Defense: 2 Safetys (Internal Audit)

- The last option to stop a play if it gets past the first two lines of defense
- Fast, agile, and nimble, and has the biggest field of view in the entire organization
- Can see the quarterback call an audible, and can proactively tell the first or second lines of defense to change their approach
- Can run an interception himself to catch the ball before it makes it into the endzone for a touchdown
